- Choose the right layout. If you've been building a career for more than a decade, you might have a lot of information to pack into a small space. Choosing a double-column layout for your resume can be effective in saying a lot without overcrowding.
- Categorize your skills. As a full stack developer, you have a long list of technical skills in different categories. Putting them in groups makes your resume look more organized and easier for recruiters to read.

- Choosing to include your GPA. In most cases, your GPA is not necessary on your resume. However, if you have an exceptionally high one (<https://github.com/danette.east>) it's a good way to leverage your knowledge in the field.
- Certifications to fill in the gaps. Getting certified in particular skills can help give you an advantage if you're lacking industry experience. It shows commitment to the job and an investment in your career.

- Highlight your best work history. If you're applying for a senior position, you probably have a lot of experience to draw from. Instead of squelching it as much as you can, focus on roles most relevant to your target job and list your greatest achievements.

- Keep your education section basic. An education section generally includes only the school, degree, and years attended. If you graduated many years back, you may even choose to omit them. Your experience is what recruiters want to see for senior positions.

Let's get SUMMARY with the first section of your full stack developer resume.

Writing a good Full stack developer resume header

Honestly, a full stack developer needs his or her achievements:

- 1. Naming AI/ML-based algorithms. Well-acquainted with HR methodologies.

- 2. Contact (email and phone number)

- 3. Location

EDUCATION

- 4. GitHub, NPM, or Stack Overflow links

M.S. in Computer Science

5. Personal blog link

Stanford University

GPA
3.9 / 4.0

While this may seem like a tiny detail, it helps you connect with the right employer.

When you add a personal blog or a portfolio link, you help them dive into a bit more about you.

EXPERIENCE

Jeff Atwood of Stack Overflow once wrote that "If your Stack Overflow reputation is less than 125, and you're a developer, you bring shame to your family."

2018 - Present San Francisco, CA

That's how important those links really are to a hiring manager.

Here are a few full stack developer resume samples that show you the difference.

EDUCATION

For example, if we were asked to list a side project (<https://enhancv.com/blog/projects-on-resume/>) that's all about scheduling app, there are better ways than just listing out the project specifics.

2008 - 2009

Palo Alto, CA

We can talk about how product development, requirement analysis, design and planning was a critical part of the project in addition to the technical details.

EXPERIENCE

Doing that helps you plan on other applicant's weaknesses and make your resume stand out.

Senior Full Stack Developer

Even sections for language skills (<https://enhancv.com/blog/resume-language-skills/>) or certifications (<https://enhancv.com/blog/certifications-on-resume/>) can make a big impact.

(<https://enhancv.com/blog/are-cover-letters-necessary/>) is a good fit for the full stack developer (<https://enhancv.com/cover-letter-examples/full-stack-developer/>) job you're applying for.

Your key takeaways for writing a great full stack developer resume:

- Focus on hybrid resume with less than 1 page, or a max of 2 pages
- Add a resume header and make sure to have your GitHub/Stack Overflow/personal blog links in it.
- Total years of experience, tech skills, and proud achievements should be in your resume summary.
- Show that you currently know what the role demands, but you've covered the basics in your professional working experience.
- Increased company revenue by 30% within 2 months after developing and launching a new product.
- Designed and Developed UI design for over 15 clients using CSS, HTML, ASP.NET, Vue, and React websites scoring over 85 on Lighthouse.
- Consider adding separate sections for recognitions, achievements, and certifications
